- 16.9 The hospitality business shall not be liable for damages inflicted, either directly or indirectly, on anyone or anything that are the direct or indirect result of any defect or any capacity or circumstance at, in or on any movable or immovable property of which the hospitality business is the holder, lessee, leaseholder or owner or that is otherwise at the disposal of the hospitality business.

Article 17 Force majeure

- 17.1 There is question of force majeure on the part of the hospitality business in the event of a circumstance that cannot be attributed to the hospitality business but that does impede the implementation of the hospitality agreement by the hospitality business such that it becomes impossible or burdensome. As the occasion arises, there is question of a non-attributable shortcoming of the hospitality business that cannot be blamed on the same.
- 17.2 There is question of force majeure (but not exclusively) in the event of revocation of permits, national mourning, hindrance and interruption of transport possibilities as a result of which required products / goods cannot be delivered, shortage of staff, failures in the hospitality business and impediments caused by measures, legislation or decisions of international, national and regional (official) authorities.
- 17.3 In the event of force majeure, the parties examine in joint consultation and within reason whether the hospitality agreement can be suspended or can be adjusted to the new situation, e.g. by changing and/or moving the hospitality agreement. Cost reductions and/or cost increases as a result of the aforementioned adjustments are fully at the risk and expense of the customer.
- 17.4 If suspension or adjustment does not appear to be possible then the hospitality business and the customer are entitled to rescind the hospitality agreement or the part that has not been implemented yet. The hospitality business always remains entitled to the stipulated reservation value in full, minus any and all cost reductions and increased with any and all cost increases resulting from the said rescission. In case of private customers - in terms of the part of the hospitality agreement that can be qualified as an agreement for the provision of services - the actually incurred costs and reasonable wages are reimbursed by the customer in lieu of the reservation value for that part of the agreement.
- 17.5 The hospitality business shall not be liable for situations of force majeure. If so required, the customer must personally take out insurance against the financial risks of force majeure.

- 18.1 This article contains additional arrangements about epidemic and contagious diseases, e.g. Covid-19, (hereinafter collectively referred to as: epidemic diseases) and is applicable if a hospitality agreement cannot be implemented in the stipulated form due to official measures. For this purpose 'official measures' are understood as the then applicable official rules and measures in connection with epidemic diseases.

The hospitality business makes an effort to minimise cost increases and to maximise cost reductions. The customer understands that the hospitality business also depends on all suppliers involved and the conditions applied by them.
- 18.10 If the hospitality agreement cannot be adjusted to the official measures then the guiding principle is that the moment of implementation of the hospitality agreement is moved. The hospitality business and the customer examine in joint consultation whether it is possible to move, in the course of which both parties shall act in a solution-oriented, reasonable and equitable manner.
- 18.11 If date under the hospitality agreement is adjusted then the reservation value stipulated between the hospitality business and the customer remains payable to the hospitality business, with the understanding that any and all cost reductions are deducted from and any and all cost increases are added to the same. The customer understands that the hospitality business also depends on all suppliers involved and the conditions applied by them.
- 18.12 If the hospitality agreement cannot be adjusted in the context of this article then it can be terminated by either party, in the course of which the services by the hospitality business are cancelled. If the hospitality agreement is terminated and the services by the hospitality business are cancelled then the reservation value stipulated between the hospitality business and the customer remains payable to the hospitality business, with the understanding that any and all cost reductions are deducted from and any and all cost increases are added to the same. The hospitality business makes an effort to minimise cost increases and to maximise cost reductions. The customer understands that the hospitality business also depends on all suppliers involved and the conditions applied by them. Article 21 Applicable law and disputes

- 21.1 Dutch law is exclusively applicable to hospitality agreements.
- 21.2 In case of disputes between the hospitality business and a customer the competent court in the place of establishment of the hospitality business in the Netherlands is exclusively competent, unless mandatory statutory provisions designate a different competent court and without prejudice to the authority of the hospitality business to have the dispute settled by the court that would have been competent failing this clause.

Article 22 Closing provisions

- 22.1 The invalidity of one or more provisions in the UHCI shall not affect the validity of the remaining provisions.
